

ATTACHMENT A

In the claims:

Claims 1-8 (Canceled)

9. (New) In a method for providing a real-time information on a title bar of a Windows in real time in which an advancing method is the real-time information displayed on the title bar of an active window is transmitted into the title bar of a new active window executed by a user continuously, the improvement comprising the steps of:

a) registering a real-time information service icon being changeable information of current state of a program and supplementary information on a tray of a Windows wallpaper by installing the program displaying real-time information on the title bar of the active window in a client;

b) setting up the real-time information to be displayed on the title bar of the active window and displaying type of said information by the user from said tray;

c) entering an identification and password to a real-time information server and logging in the server to display the information set up by the user on the title bar;

d) displaying the real-time information transmitted from the server on the title bar of the active window;

e) detecting transition events from the active window to the new active window executed by the user in the client;

f) extracting handle value of the present active window from a Windows based Operating System to search new active window executed by the user and a handle value H corresponding to the title bar of said present active window; and

g) comparing a handle value of the present active window extracted from the Windows based Operating System with the handle value H corresponding to the title bar of the present active window; and

h) displaying the real-time information according to a first condition to display real-time information set up by the user after searching the present active window handling said handle value H, if two handle values are identical after said comparison.